

@Janon Meyer

Vid 1: ★★☆☆

This neuroscientist has gained nearly 2 million Instagram followers over the past few years, and I decided to spend the last 114 hours of my life reverse engineering how she runs her business and probably makes multiple seven figures a year.

This is the exact process, and we're going to walk through the entire thing and make it better.

So her name is Emily McDonald.

Her main product is this thing called MindCraft, that is a $3,000 course, and it's, to my understanding, has a community plus coaching aspect to it as well.

And this is a multi-week course.

This is very easily, you can justify the price of this being $3,000, no problem. The problem, though, is how people go from Instagram to this product.

To my understanding, the only way you can join that course and that community and that coaching program is by attending one of the webinars.

That's not actually the problem.

The problem is how people go from step one to step two, Instagram to webinar.

Emily does not use ManyChat.

What are we doing?

She basically posts a link on her Instagram stories.

And because she has 1.7 million followers, the volume is there, and she has no problem selling out these webinars.

But if you know anything about your boy, we're going to take it one step further with data.

So instead of going from Instagram to the webinar, we're going to go from Instagram to the Instagram DMs and then to the webinar.

So we're going to collect email, we're going to collect name.

And here's what's really important here.

Even if Emily just asks one question, what are you looking to achieve, manifest, or reprogram your brain for in the next 12 months?

Is it for a relationship, a career change?
Whatever it is.

If we ask a multiple choice question within this DM automation, we can still send people to the webinar.

But now with the follow-up process, she is using Kit.
So Instagram to the DMs, to Webinar, to Kit.

And in Kit, you can use that one piece of information, the 12-month piece of information to customize the follow-up to people who did or did not go to the webinar.

And then you can keep on selling this course for $3,000 by making every message you send to these people personalized.

So it's the same pitch, it's just how it's positioned.

So let's just say that out of the 500 people who attend, Emily converts 0.5.

And for the sake of simplicity and math, we'll call this three people.

So at three people, that is $9,000 in revenue.

Now I attended one of these webinars.

I did not really get any email follow-up.

Huge opportunity here.

Let's look at the numbers.

So if we take the conversion rate from 0.5% conservatively to like even 1% or 1.25%, again, it's a very expensive product to sell through a webinar, but we're talking about double.

We're talking about $15,000.

We're talking about $18,750.

So we're almost doubling the revenue if we have this personalization process in place.

Emily, if you're watching this, DM me.

Anybody who has a business similar to this or wants the exact template that I use for my clients, just comment the word template.

I will send you a free template and I will break down exactly how to use it in less than two minutes.

I'm fucking sweating.

Vid 1:

If you're running a high ticket info offer and you're not tracking every statistic of every single sales rep in your offer, you are missing out on so much money. For all of the offers that I run, I'm able to track how much each individual closer has collected, their total close rate, their show rate, how many total confirmed calls they're getting compared to calls that were actually taken. Same exact thing with setters as well. I can see how much cash they've collected for the offer, how many calls they're confirming for the closers and the show rate of those actual leads as well. Plus of course the close rate of those leads that they said as well. Using this, we can make educated decisions when it comes to hiring and firing new sales reps because as you can see here, this sales rep has done half the amount of the other sales rep, still has set a good close rate and show rate, but this setter has set a 92% close rate and a 93% show rate.

What is the difference here? Why are pretty much all of his sets closing and showing up to these calls? Let's reverse engineer his process, go through his calls, go through his sales process that he's using to see if there's anything different or better that he is doing, which we can then implement for the other sales reps. This way we can improve everyone's rates to make more money. And if other people's rates are not improving, maybe we fired them and find someone else. You cannot scale an offer if you don't have this data, because how are you supposed to fix things if you don't even know what the problem is in the first place?

@Omar Ouda

I think one of the biggest advantages that you can have as a coach or content creator is having a paid community.

And no, it's not because you're collecting revenue every single month or because it's easy to run, but because it's literally the warmest audience that you will ever have.

Just think about it, these are literally people that have already paid you, which means that they trust you.

And instead of ascending them or upgrading them to a higher ticket option, most creators and coaches just let the community run and never use it to its full potential.

And to do something like that, you simply need to understand the concept of an ascension funnel.

An ascension funnel is simply when you upgrade an existing member from a lower ticket option to a higher ticket option.

Because a paying prospect will continue staying in motion as long as they find what you're doing is valuable.

And you simply do this by making a direct offer inside of your community, also known as a power offer.

And this power offer consists of six main things.

Number one, you want to start off by making the audience aware that a launch was happening.

Then you want to define who the offer was for.

Clearly, you want to lay out the goal of the offer.

You want to explain the entire process in detail.

You want to give them a guarantee.

And you want to inject as much scarcity as you can.

And this is exactly what we did with one of my clients.

And as you can see, within the first seven days, we were able to collect $13,000 in cash.

But we ended the whole launch at $23,000 in cash, only advertising to 80 paying members.

@Sawyerkverts

You know, one of the most important things for outreach is just mutuals.

Like, you know, one way that I kind of approached that was just, you know, buying courses and like making myself connecting with the people inside of those programs.

I always kept my outreach super casual.

Like I would just say, yo, is my first message.

The biggest thing is just gonna be the Loom video that you're sending out.

So having to be very personalized and just getting a lot of value within that.

One thing to mention too, and I know like obviously a lot of you guys that are starting out love the idea of getting a setup, but if you guys haven't worked with anybody before, I wouldn't even necessarily try to get a setup if you don't have the expertise to back it.

It's gonna be a lot easier with sale or, you know, easier to close the deal, especially if it's somebody that, you know, maybe doesn't even have an offer yet when it's just pure rev on like what additional you're gonna make them.

You know, one thing to mention as well,

like if you guys are struggling on the sales calls itself to sign these deals, maybe if you don't have the results to speak, you know, and the proof to show that you're actually good at what you thought you do, don't necessarily try and push for upfronts.

@Maxiinhouse

Vid 1:

99% of people that run paid ads are fucking horrible.

They have shit conversion because their retargeting sucks simply because they don't post organic.

How can you retarget someone who doesn't know who you are?

The top 1% info simply run organic content first to build credibility, relatability, trust, and most importantly, show client results.

And keep in mind, only 20% of your followers will actually see your content organically.

So when people come in, you use ads simply to amplify those leads nurturing.

You create more trust in FOMO with organic content and the paid content should force people to either follow you or book a call.

If you have a good profile funnel, you will get solid followers and all you need to convert them is an appointment setter, a CEO, a head of success, and running ads.

Because I make content, my ads guy retargets, my appointment setter takes all of these leads and turns them into booked calls, and our head of success makes sure that these leads are good enough to come into our program.

We get booked calendars and we get a ton of people who are pre-sold.

Now, before I show you how we're converting them on calls, you have to realize the only things that matter are your cost per lead, your cost per book call, your cost per showed up call, your cost per close, and your average order value.

Once they hop on a call, they end up paying in full.

We get a new client.

And then once we scale them, they make a YouTube testimonial for us.

So all we do is go all the way back up to organic content.

And every single time that a client signs with us, we end up making so much money off of it, not because of them, but because we know they will succeed or else they wouldn't have joined the program, which leads to a solid testimonial.

Vid 2:

Top of funnel, middle of funnel, bottom of funnel, cold leads, warm leads, payment ready leads.

Most people are building funnels backwards. They're trying to convince people who don't have money to spend money that they don't have. The sophisticated approach is understanding that certain behaviors indicate a buyer's intent. And if you know what you're looking for,

you can reverse engineer your content to attract only those bottom of funnel payment ready leads.

This is a selective exposure funnel. You create targeted content that only resonates with people who are problem aware and solution seeking. Most entrepreneurs think content is about posting consistently, but what they don't realize is that there's an entire qualification system running behind every single piece of content that gets published.

Every single post is engineered through a three layer architecture. Each layer filters out all the people who are not looking to buy and magnetizes the people who are. Layer one has to do with a disqualification hook.

I use elevated but simple language that speaks directly to my ICP, which filters out the bad

viewers and retains my ideal clients. Layer two is enhancing your authority.

Everything from clothing, location, setting is all designed to increase my perceived authority. When qualified buyers see me, they immediately recognize the endless social proof and follow. And layer three is an auto qualification setting system. The systems we have in place identify and engage with minimum 100 ICPs every single day. They come to us, are filtered into ICPs, and send direct messages about working together or booking a call. The result? Instead of hoping for 1% of random followers to convert, you're speaking directly to people who already have the problem, the budget, and the urgency to solve it. No more price objections, just prospects that are immediately ready to buy on high tickets like 20k. Follow me to see exactly how this selective exposure funnel works and how you can implement it on your own.

Vid 3:

Top of funnel, middle of funnel, bottom of funnel.

People spend 95% of their attention on getting more attention, on getting more leads and getting more views.

Now, this is wrong because every single person that you're spending majority of your time on is disqualified.

They're not even a good lead, but still you're spending all of your energy on getting them in.

Then when they speak to the dialer or the setter in the middle of funnel, they're not even qualified.

So you're wasting your team's time and energy, let alone when they get here.

Majority of them are completely unqualified.

You need to rebuild your funnel to look reverse

so that the top is the narrow end and the top is actually the bottom of funnel.

Because then when you're only speaking to ICPs, the only people you're getting in your funnel are ICPs and qualified people.

Then the entire process is so much smoother because your team doesn't have to deviate from the norm.

They don't have to spend time qualifying

if the only people you try to get the attention of are qualified ICPs.

Vid 4:

Right here, after objection handling, we're very decisively.

I'm actually very interested on the whole thing.

Yeah, here we go.

So basically, if they make the decision, yes.

Of course, we send the payment link, agreement sign, onboarding call scheduled, the clients put in the program resources, client put in a one-on-one group, you get all this stuff.

We basically onboard them.

After they pay and that call ends, I go through there and I build a custom action plan for them.

We understand their goals because we have the call and we're taking the transcript of that and we're outlining it based off of how our past clients who have gotten success have done it.

And we're saying, this is the problem that this person's had.

What can we do to get him to his goal?

And then we have that database, that knowledge to basically build that.

Now, if a client does not close, we push for the follow-up, of course.

If the follow-up is booked, you make a one-to-two-week action plan completely custom for them, write them a little note slash letter.

And that essentially helps them make more money before the call and look to you as an authority, which naturally makes them want to give you more money.

That's and that's worked well.

Incredibly.

Yeah.

And this is the biggest one.

If they don't book the follow-up, they just say it's not for them.

Usually, it's because, one, they don't see the value.

Two, they're not confident enough in themselves.

Or three, they don't trust.

So those are typically the three things.

But if they don't trust us and we don't book the follow-up, no matter who it is, they get a free game plan for themselves, completely custom.

It's not generic.

We go through every transfer.

Yeah.

Essentially helping them make money for free.
The effect that it has on the lead is that they know we care because I took time or my team took time out of their day, after the call, after we got a no, after we wasted our time to build something custom for them. Make them feel like we care because we do. And essentially make them realize, okay, well, I've never had this happen ever. Two, is the lead's already taking your guidance. And what happens when someone takes your guidance? They're going to naturally have questions. And who are they going to go to ask questions about an action plan that got custom built for them? They're going to go to that person. And third is the lead will end up wanting to book a follow-up call. Then boom. I mean, it ends up going, you know, if they didn't book the follow-up, it goes all the way back to the sales call booked. If they do book the follow-up, we don't have to do the whole system, the whole flow, just the sales call start. And then after, you know, of course, like we have just kind of how our onboarding works naturally. Yeah. Amazing.

Vid 5:

What's the biggest reason content gets views but doesn't convert?
I don't go for views.
Instead of a hook qualifying someone to watch the video and hook them, I do the opposite.
I use something called disqualification hooks, which means that I want any retard to not watch the video. And I want only my ICP to be entertained or hooked into the video. So I use disqualification hooks, even if it's just increasing your language. For example, a hook that I've used a lot is top of funnel, middle of funnel, bottom of funnel. Only someone who is my ICP would know those terms. So that alone, it takes out all the retards I don't want watching my shit and it keeps all the smart people.

Vid 6:

This is how I turn every reel into a free ad that prints sales calls.

We're just using Instagram's algorithm against itself through five stages.

Algorithmic recognition, conversion hub, familiarity loop, trust to sale, and everyone's favorite, PIP.

So let me walk you through how to do all five stages.

Stage one is obviously Instagram reels.

Why?

Because you can get exponential reach and force target viewers to watch your content

if you know how to do it.

You basically just need disqualification hooks and knowing how to leverage repurposing content.

Stage two is about converting every single person who visits your profile into a follower.

The reason that an ICP will look at my profile and immediately hit follow is simply because of my positioning.

Right after they follow, you have to start building rapport.

If you build rapport and you show that you're competent in what you do, you are going to be at the top of mind for the lead.

To stage three, which is the familiarity loop.

You're just consistently posting stories, posts, and reels to make sure that the prospect is nurtured and they see free value in ways where you're showing your client results so that they realize that you're the solution to where they want to go.

Then you should use mirror exposure.

If you don't know what this is, I did a video earlier on it and run retargeting ads to make sure that people are seeing you.

Stage four is the most important part and it's just about converting the people that you're actually in conversations with into someone who wants to book a call with you because they see you as the person that will solve their problem.

For every single ICP that follows you, the legion has to be personalized with story replies and all of the stuff that you see right here. And that will simply lead to a full calendar. Then they'll just be forced to pay in full as long as you're showing them video testimonials. Give me a follow. If you don't, you're an idiot.

Vid 7:

Do you own a business?

I do, yes.

What do you do for a living?

I help people scale their info offers and become partners in their business.

Tell me a little bit more about that.

So there's a lot of people who sell high-ticket coaching.

They sell high-ticket courses.

They sell consulting, agency services.

They would pay me to come into their business, help them scale, increase their revenue, build their personal brand, all that.

Have you ever worked at a nine-to-five?

I delivered jumpies for kids' parties in high school for 14 days and then quit.

So what gave you the confidence to quit a nine-to-five where you have a guaranteed income coming in from somebody else every week to start your own business and be an entrepreneur?

I learned everything just from YouTube and I was making money before that and realized how much I hated trading my time for making money.

What would you say is the biggest advantage that kids have nowadays that they didn't have 20 years ago? YouTube, and there's so much free information.

If you're a kid and you haven't made your first 10K a month, you do not need to buy a course.

Yes, some of them will help, but you don't need to.

You can get to even $50,000 a month just watching YouTube and actually implementing the actions that people tell you to.

What's your goal for 2026?

I wanna hit a $250,000 a month in 2026.

So that's my main goal.

Any message to the younger generation, maybe someone watching this video that's at home scrolling and they're kind of lost and they don't know what to do.

Find whatever you're passionate about.

Let's say you're passionate about something in school.

You might not actually be passionate about the topic, but you're passionate about learning.

So have infinite curiosity and then just apply action to that curiosity in a way where you can provide a solution to someone and you will make money.

Exactly.

Vid 8:

1 to 5k price, fearful prospect.

$13,000 or above price, easy decision for the prospect.

If you're not leveraging pricing psychology, you'll never understand this.

Most operators present 1 to 5,000 dollars for my program.

The prospect's cognitive framework processes this as a fearful decision.

It's too risky, it's too uncertain.

Normal business owners price their program at 1 to 5,000 dollars and for the lead, that is a fearful decision.

Instead, I engineer three psychological triggers into my pricing architecture.

So $13,000 becomes cognitively inevitable.

Here's the framework.

I present outcomes from demographically identical prospects.

Their subconscious concludes this methodology applies to my situation.

If I do X, then I can also achieve X.

The lead then realizes that their goal is realistic and their curiosity increases.

Social proof.

I display 50 plus validated testimonials day after day after day.

So the lead's doubt decreases and their dependency from my solution increases.

Creating an imbalance in their neural pathways

so that they interpret it as since everyone's getting results, I should too.

And finally, loss aversion.

$13,000 upfront payment plus 20% rev share

after $50,000 has been generated.

Instead of their cognition focusing on the fear of losing $13,000 to justify the investment, their cognition fixates on losing a $50,000 opportunity instead of losing the $13,000,

just like you're missing advanced pricing psychology

by not following me.

Implementing this psychological architecture,

prospects transition from justifying the investment to accelerating the timeline and asking you for the payment link.

@Soo Wei

Vid 1:

This guy made over 15 million dollars by playing Fortnite and the craziest thing is you could be doing the exact same thing. The online space is kind of really booming and if you're not making money online like this guy we have a huge problem. Just last year when I was a senior in high school

I was able to make $15,000 last month using this exact business. I was able to buy my mom the gift since she wanted, put my way to job and not have to rely on college to go down the route of working a nine-to-five. This could be you and the best part about it is that it only takes two months to set everything up. And no I'm not selling you a course like all the other gurus online.

If you want access to a video that transformed my life and brought me from zero to $15,000 per month as an 18 year old, comment the word video and I'll send it to you again.

Vid 2:

Is it possible for a 19-year-old kid to make $100,000 a month while balancing university?

Three years ago when I was 16, I told myself that I'd make $100,000 a month before I turned 20.

I told all my friends, I told all my family, and I was a clown.

I literally got clowned on.

But I started a business anyways, and it took me two years until I saw some real success with my business.

At 18, I was making around $10k a month running my marketing agency, but I came into a problem.

I didn't have enough time, and so I could either cruise comfortably at around $10k a month, or just drop out and go all in.

Now, after months of convincing and talking back and forth with my Asian parents, they finally let me drop out, but there was one problem.

If I dropped out of university, I'd have to get deported back to Malaysia.

After all the effort of convincing them and telling them that I'm going to do these big things, I was kind of forced to stay in college.

I took it as a sign from the universe that I could balance both, so I tried my best, and I did.

I stayed in university, and after five months of just grinding every single day in my dorm room, we hit $50,000 a month.

Hitting $50k a month was also the moment where I felt the most empty and lost in life.

I barely hung out with my friends, I was just stuck in my room all day, and it felt like I was just working towards a number on the screen that didn't really mean anything.

I started hating work so much to the point where I set a completely new goal for myself.

Prioritizing my life over my business.

I decided to book a trip to Dubai with all of my clients so I could finally find the reason why I started my business in the first place.

Dubai was the best time of my life.

We were working together, we were riding camels, and we were doing everything, and that was the reset that I needed.

The month I got back from Dubai, I knew I was going to hit $100k a month.

So I went all in, and we were doing it.

And just before I turned 20, we achieved our goal.

We made $151,000 cash collected at 19.

We made the 16-year-old me proud.

I'm so excited.

Thank you.

Vid 3:

to just expose his strategy to making over $300 million in the last 3 years. The way that he makes his money is absolutely genius. He sells a course called Pusses University, where 200,000 people pay in $50 a month. That means he makes over $10 million every single month. Here's how he did it in under 40 seconds. First, he came over a digital product that he wanted to sell to his audience. In this case, he taught people how to escape the matrix. He hired a bunch of professors to teach others how to do it, so he does little to no work. That means his product is extremely scalable. Next, this is the most genius part. He hires a bunch of people to repurpose his content and post clips about it. You see all those fan pages of this little orse logos. He teaches all these people to repurpose his content on Instagram and TikTok to go viral. As a result, they get tons of traffic and they monetize by directing their traffic into their link in bio. Now, take these two things here. He gets in front of his target audience without having to do any work whatsoever. All he does is go on a podcast, say some crazy shit. And his minions do the rest of the work. I partnered up with a creator, Lyte and we were able to scale to 50k in our first month of working together. If you want to learn how you can utilize this business model and make yourself a shit ton of money, I filmed a 15-minute video breaking down how it works and how you can get started. Comment the word video and I'll send it to you for free.

Vid 4:

I hate low ticket. I absolutely hate it. I don't believe in school. I don't believe in like the

$50 a month subscription because in my opinion, if some guy is willing to pay you 5k or 3k and you're charging 50 bucks, you don't actually make $50. You lose out on the amount that he could have paid you. If anything, a free funnel or a low ticket actually delays the buying process for them to actually buy your high ticket service. Because if someone wants to work with you, their first thought is like, let me buy his low ticket. See what it's about. Go through it. And for our niche, it's like we're dealing with busy guys. And so they don't even end up going through your course and they'll never buy a program. I think that the idea of low ticket is perfect because you try to monetize as many people as possible, but the execution is bad. The perfect thing would be a low ticket workshop where you sell a one day mastermind or one hour coaching call or something like that. Go over a specific topic and then upselling everyone on that call. That would work much better than a low ticket because a low ticket is just too much to consume and it's like a completely different offer than a high ticket. So that's why.

Vid 5:

All of my Instagram reels and all my YouTube videos showcase why people buy from me. And because I'm extremely intentional, that's why I don't have a lot of followers and I've been able to make so much. It's actually ridiculous. When we ask each client why they make this buy from us, number one thing that they always say is, bro, you actually care. You actually have a good relationship with your client. So I'm showing us in Bali. And I'm also showing that you guys are making cash. Another reason why is because my values and morals are very aligned. I don't show a lot of flashy shit. This is a video of me talking about my morals and my values, my money doesn't matter.

When I look at your Instagram,
the reason why yours is only at 10%,
it's value videos,
but there's no intention behind it because anyone can replicate this.
It's never about the follower count.
It's just being intentional with understanding why someone chooses you and showing that more in your content.

Vid 6:

I made 70K off of this story sequence.
The highest.
The first story always has to pique the client's interest.
There's a million things you can do to scale and everyone making 100K a month is not doing a million things at once.
They're picking and choosing specific problems to solve that require the lowest effort for the highest return.
And then I show social proof.
It's very intentional that I put 15K in one day.
So I give you a reason for you to listen to me.
From 5K a month to 12K a day simply because he started charging 6K for his fitness offer and attracting high quality clients.
So I show like, hey, if you focus on this one thing,
here's the result that you can get.
Here's the result my clients get.
22K a day for Alistair and Brian.
They both implemented a very simple price increase that allowed them to scale their business and hit record months.
I covered this in my London mastermind.
I hosted for my clients,
showing them how I increased my prices to 20K.
If you want access to the recording,
DM me a price and I'll send it to you.
Nice. So you're piquing the interest.

You're saying that most people have a problem,
but you don't say the problem straight away.
And then you give like the transformation of like how they solve that problem.
Yeah. And then the resource or normally what you want them to do is after they message you, they get it.
Exactly. Yeah, exactly.
It's subconscious, but if you see a group of 10 people just sitting down and watching me present, it creates that authority and it creates a perception that,
hey, if people are listening to him,
do X, Y, Z, I should probably listen as well.
Yeah. Yeah.
And it sparks curiosity.
And I got, I believe off of this one alone,
I got probably 700 inbounds and I made 70K off of this cash, off of this story sequence that I contribute to.
And it's very intentional.
I show a lot of proof while also providing value.
How can you spark enough curiosity to where people would want to care about what you're saying?
That's the key thing.
Once you figure that out and once you really master that,
that's when everything will just make,
you'll make everything so much easier for yourself.
Okay. Let's create your story sequence.
Okay. Let's see.
Pull up your phone.

Vid 7:

You know, what's the craziest part?

Everyone says that they want to change and that they want this type of lifestyle,
but no one actually does shit.

No one's willing to back up the talk that they have and how much they want it with action.

And when I look at people like that, I just get disgusted because you are just such a hypocrite.

Look at your new year resolutions and just check if you're even close.
Because I promise 90% of you are not even close because you're not willing to take fucking risks.
Everyone always puts the blame on something else.
Like, oh, it's the bad mentor.
It's this thing.
Bro, shut the fuck up.
It's your fault.
Everything is your fault.
And the moment that you realize everything is your fault,
you can take control of your entire situation, take more responsibility, and change everything that you need to change.
I wish you could understand how I'm feeling.
And you can.
Just put in the fucking work.
All right?
I love you guys.

Vid 8: ★

What is your mission and what is your why?
My mission is to change the entire education system.
There's a very, very big gap in education space right now where there's no middle ground.
It's either you drop out and you take a huge leap of faith,
you take a huge risk,
you go against what everyone is telling you to do, or you stay in university and you get in tons of debt and you learn skills that are not really practical and you get a degree that may not even guarantee you a job in this day and age.
My goal is I want to create that middle ground where I create a university where we teach real world skills like sales, like content, and actually skills that people can monetize off of without actually finding jobs.
When I made my first 150K,
my initial impression was like,
I'm seriously, seriously, seriously considering dropping out.
But the reason why I still went to school is because I did not want to disappoint my parents.

No amount of money could have covered up me dropping out in my family's eyes.
And I realized like, hey, if I can balance both, amazing.
And that's what I'm doing right now.
But what if there was a alternative to where I went to an actual practical real world school where I learned real world skills that can actually transfer over to my business instead of getting a useless degree that I'm not even going to use to apply for jobs?
I think that's the mission.

Vid 9:

A lot of you are already at the 10 to 50K a month mark and you're extremely complacent.
And I don't blame you.
You're doing basically better than all your friends.
Whenever you guys go back to your hometown, you guys are probably the person
that's making the most amount of money.
But if you want to scale to 100K a month,
that's a million a year.
That is not hard to get to at all.
There's infinite amount of paths to 100K a month.
And consistent execution of a reasonable plan is so much more effective in constantly searching for a perfect one.
And so the number one thing I want you guys to focus on is what is it that you're doing right now that's already working and how can you do more of it?
How can you double down even more?
So if your organic marketing is already bringing in 50K a month, how can you post more content?
How can you go from posting one or two times a day to three or four times a day?
It's that simple.

Vid 10:

You need to be so uncomfortable with your situation where you make a change in your input every single fucking day.

When I was at 50, I'd say 50 very softly.

I didn't think it was a lot of money.

And it's my mindset and my perception of where I was at that made me want to change it and get to this point.

And even when I say 200 now, it's like, I just don't think it's that impressive.

I need to say a mil and then I'll be like, okay, that's where I feel really good about myself.

If there's one piece of advice, it's that one.

Because I can give you all the little strategies, but the one thing that will move the needle the most is your perception of yourself.

And you being disgusted with where you're at because you will move and you will make more money when you are disgusted with where you're at right now.

Vid 11:

Objections mean a lack of quality in your marketing.

As an offer owner, the highest lever you can pull is to get better at marketing, not get better at closing.

And the reason why is because closing is a temporary solution to a long-term problem.

But if you focus on increasing your marketing and actually understanding what the data and insights that are stopping them from working with me, now your content becomes better and now you don't even need an A-player closer.

It's a 7-11-4 rule.

To make a purchase, a consumer needs to engage with a brand for seven hours, have 11 touch points, and counter the brand across four different platforms.

This is how much it takes.

And so if you're not willing to play the long-term game, don't even try.

And so the people on my IG are going to my YouTube.

The people on my YouTube are going to my IG.

And it's this constant flywheel.

And so if you're watching 20, 30-minute videos of me, you're watching 60-second reels of me,
you're reading all my story sequences,
you're engaging with my appointment set in the DMs,
in a matter of weeks or a matter of days,
you are gonna buy from me.
And a lot of you already have one aspect.
Let's say the IG reels dialed in,
but your appointment setting process is completely non-existent right now.
And then the YouTube is also not where it needs to be.
And the stories are also not where it needs to be.
So you have one out of the four.
If you dial in just two out of the four,
that's a double in the business right there.
It's that simple.

Vid 12:

If you want to become insanely rich and have your parents question whether or not what you're doing is ethical or illegal, then I want you to watch this video.

For some context, I built a million dollar per year company at 20 while in university.

Last month we did over $200,000 and if I had to give you one piece of advice to make more money, it's to charge more for what you're selling.

The easiest way to scale is not by solving a small problem for a large group of people, it's by solving big problems for a small group of people so that you can charge a premium and scale with little stress.

What I do is I sell a very premium $10,000 to $20,000 offer to a select group of people.

Now it sounds very simple for me to just say charge more and target a richer client but here's what you actually have to do.

You have to find out every single problem that your prospect faces when they face this issue and you have to solve the complete agency process from the moment that they face the problem to the outcome that they want.

For example, I used to run an appointment setting agency where I helped a lot of coaches book calls but I realized they didn't just want book calls, they wanted more sales, they wanted a $50,000 to $100,000 a month business.

So let me not just focus on helping them book calls, let me focus on helping them with content, the sales closing, the appointment setting, the fulfillment and everything that they needed to scale up to six figures a month so that I could charge more.

And the moment that I solved more problems for them, they were willing to pay me a much more premium price point.

Solve rich people problems and get paid rich people prices, it is the best way to scale.

Vid 13:

In a span of two days, I spent $24,000 of Hormozy without a sales call.

The content and the personal brand already sold me.

When you look at his YouTube, it looks like he's just providing free value and you already have a good impression of Hormozy. But then on the back end, he's selling stuff for 6K, selling stuff for 18K.

It doesn't feel like he's selling.

The problem that everyone is facing right now is that you guys are focused on creating content to get clients.

And when you create a personal brand around your offer, people don't feel as genuine.

And so the best personal brands, they show no intent to sell, even if there is an intent to sell.

And what that does to you subconsciously is it lowers your guard.

And when you lower your guard, you can be influenced.

And it's the whole idea of when you walk in the store and the salesman is just straight away coming to you, asking you, oh, like, what do you need?

What do you need?

What do you want?

I can help you.

Like, you don't want to give off that impression immediately when someone watches your content.

You want to kind of get them to find you.

Always ask yourself, okay, what do people buy into me for?
And how can you double down on that?
And so the best way to do that is to reverse engineer what people chose from you.
This is a question that we asked in the onboarding, and these are a few responses that I got.
This guy said transparency.
The fact that you led with value before trying to extract money.
The way you do biz, morals, values, all that type of stuff.
So that's a sign for me to double down on that specific thing.

Vid 14:

The moment something must be done, you fucking do it because the universe is watching.

The universe will track every time you don't follow through with something and it notes down every instance.

The term for this is ITFT, the inability to follow through.

Every time you say in your mind that you're going to do something and you don't do it, you lose trust with yourself.

The guys that are in the gym, they have a much higher chance of actually making 100k a month than a regular person.

And the reason why is because they can show up to the gym every day.

When they say they're going to hit the gym four times a week, they actually do it.

They just have so much trust with themselves because they never actually not follow through on something.

That's the key point.

You can never control your reality until you can control yourself.

And if you pay attention to the guys that are doing well, they're always the most disciplined.

Vid 15:

I was doing 50K a month for six months straight.

And once I realized this content changed,
we actually tripled the business.

And the best part is people have already done the hard work and all we're gonna do is steal what has already worked and implement it for ourselves.

Write down three of your favorite creators.
And this could be people that you just genuinely enjoy watching.
And what we're gonna do next is we're gonna reverse engineer the why.
What specifically do you like about their content?
Why do you like their content?
How do certain things make you feel?
And the reason why we're asking these questions is because you can create the same exact feeling that they made you feel for your own followers.
The first thing we have to understand is why do people actually buy into Iman Kazi?
It's very, very obvious the marketing that he's doing.
He shows everything.
He shows his mom.
He shows the cars.
He shows the private jets.
He shows the lifestyle, girls, all that type of stuff.
And so what this does is it makes you feel curious about what he does.
You ask yourself,
like, how does he actually make this type of money?
You start to look up to him
because you want his lifestyle.
You start to listen to him because he has the life you want and now you have to listen.
And you like him as a person
because he helps his mom.
He donates to the poor.
He shows you the lifestyle and who Iman is and he gets you to fall in love with him as a person.
And then he sells you on the vehicle.
People look up to you.
They think that, oh, if I want to be like this guy,
I got to take the same vehicle that he took to get to this point.
That's how it works.

@Realabdualg

ranking the top five funnels to scale your info offer let's get it number one i'll start with the launch offer and i'll put this one at a tier the only downsides to the launch funnel is you need a pretty big audience to actually make this work and if you only rely on a launch funnel your income is not fucking predictable at all this shit just keeps going up and down every month second is a dm funnel and i'll put this one at c tier by this point everybody knows they're talking to a fucking setter and not the offer owner it honestly is just not fucking scalable after a certain point third funnel is the webinar funnel and i'll put this one straight at s tier webinars have been fucking printing in the info space you can literally sell some bullshit and have it in a webinar and you'll fucking print either way people are bored of sales calls and live selling has been fucking cooking recently also webinars have a lot of fucking leverage like usually on a sales call is just one to one but with a webinar you're speaking to like 10 000 people at one time third funnel is the call funnel and i'll put this one at a tier honestly this is a good foundation that every single info product needs um the only bad thing about it is that it's not as scalable as the other ones last is the hybrid funnel and i'll put this one straight at esther this is the funnel that i use for my clients to make 204 000 in a month with 17 000 in ad spend with this funnel you basically just run profile visit ads for 30 days to your instagram page and you just nurture them through your stories and youtube after the 30 days are over you could run retargeting gas to a webinar and fucking print

@Tom Noske

Vid 1:

you need to take your unique skillset, interest, or passion and align it to a profitable brand mission.

Now, if you read that and you go,
hold on, Tom, unique skillset, interest, passion,
I have none of those things.

A worthwhile pursuit right now is investing in building that, not creating content.
Because if you don't have any point of value that you're providing the world, you're not gonna be able to turn this into a business because you're not gonna be able to create the product.
You're not gonna be able to garner the audience
for that particular thing.

It's not to say that you can't create content,
but I would encourage you to create content documenting the process of building a unique skillset.
And then you can leverage that into selling a particular thing in the future
once you've built that skillset.
You need to be, unfortunately, really fucking good at something in order for people to pay you for that thing.

Vid 2:

There are two key creator archetypes.
Number one is the valuable and boring.
These are the people who create content purely for education and end up in a situation where they create unbelievably valuable content, yes, but they're boring.
And archetype number two is the addictive and useless.
These are the ranters of the internet.
These are the people who make content purely for fun, purely to get famous,

and neither, unfortunately, are very profitable.
And this is the reason why there are so many creators,
so many people who are good at making content who are terrible at turning it into a business.

Vid 3:

You want a business where some people miss out some of the time because then that creates that intrigue of like, fuck, these workshops must be pretty good because it's limited and they're only open every other month or every month or whatever it is.

Like, it's the reason why people are willing to pay $100,000 for a fucking Rolex.

It's because when you walk into the store, you can't buy it.

You can't buy it.

And so there are people who miss out.

It's the reason why the GT3 RS is such a popular car because you cannot buy it.

You can walk in there with a bag of cash over your shoulder and they will not sell it to you.

More than 300 days of the year, you cannot buy something from me.

That ability to create that level of urgency is essentially why you then have a business

that when you tell people it's open, they act.

Vid 4:

People conflate difficulty with progress, especially if you're an entrepreneur because usually the reason you're an entrepreneur is because you've always to some extent known that you were destined to do something more.

I remember when I was like four years old,

I would like cry to my parents

because I was really scared that when I died,

no one would remember my name.

That's real.

I learned about Arnold Schwarzenegger.
I realized how much of an impact he'd made.
He was like the governor and like an actor and the bodybuilder and all this crazy shit.
And I was like,
everyone's gonna remember Arnold Schwarzenegger.
And I remember having an existential crisis when I was like five and it was terrifying for me as a kid, but that's the kind of like brain I've always had is like this relentless desire for more.
The issue is when you actually go to do the work,
most of the time it's just doing the really simple stuff for longer than everyone else that creates the results.
And so if you're caught in this mindset of,
I need to achieve more,
I need to achieve more,
I need to achieve more,
you'll do more and think that more effort is gonna create more results.
And all that really does is just slows you down.

Vid 5:

People's ability to sense bullshit is better than it's ever been.
And if a coach can't prove that their students make five times what they make minimum, then do not work with them.
There is this rhetoric going on online at the moment that the info product space is dying or we're in a trust recession.
I call bullshit.
I think that shitty online education businesses are getting snuffed out.
I think that people who aren't in this with the intention of actually helping people achieve results are getting pushed out.
Whereas the businesses that I know, my own business, is doing better than we've ever done.
The businesses that I know that are actually helping people achieve results are doing better than they've ever done.
And the reason is the results are rising to the top.
If your product sucks,

if your product doesn't do exactly what it says on the tin,
you cannot get away with good marketing anymore.
If you are not consistently getting student wins,
if you are not consistently getting feedback,
if you are not consistently helping people achieve the results that you promised,
your business will die.
And so, no, we're not in a trust recession.
Info product businesses are not dying.
Online education is not dying.
It's been around for 20, 30, 40 years.
It's going to continue to be around, but it is evolving.
And the days of flashy marketing and standing in front of a Lamborghini and getting a bunch of people to buy because they don't know any better are over.

Vid 6: ★

People will cringe and then they'll be jealous.
People will criticize and then they'll ask how you did it.
People will judge and then they'll shower you with praise.
People will laugh at you for trying and then hate themselves for not.

Vid 7:

You want to think of your career in chapters.
I vision myself at 50 years old,
having like a massive podcast and being a keynote speaker.
I've written books.
I have a massive podcast and I'm a keynote speaker.
I don't have the authority yet to charge hundreds of thousands of dollars for me to get on stage.
But I did just book a speaking gig for like $5,000.
And so I'm all the way down here.
What are the chapters?
What are the things I need to accomplish in my career to get to there?
I probably need to write a book.
I probably need to get on TV and do mainstream media.
I probably need to start a fucking podcast.
And so what are these chapters that I need to do in order to get to that dream outcome?

What can I do to reverse engineer that path?
And so for you, maybe, yeah,
you want to be this massive authority in the creative space, or I don't know, maybe you want to be a director or whatever it is,
but figuring out what that is and knowing that there will be chapters, there will be periods of time where you are working on something that's not quite there yet, but you're on the path to getting there.

Vid 8:

I hope I've portrayed how much your business is going to be built with spit and duct tape.

Building an incredible product is a result of effort, caring, and time.

Time is usually the thing that differentiates amazing online businesses from pretty dog shit ones.

And so you just need to be able to continue delivering a result for long enough that time has the ability to compound.

All great things in life are a result of compound interest.

Your fitness is a result of compound interest.

Your business is a result of compound interest.

All of it is a result of compound interest.

And so there's this fallacy that if you just bleed out your eyeballs more right now, you'll deliver a greater result.

But it's just not true.

Usually what you want to deliver is just going to be you care, you want to help people, and then you just keep doing that for five years.

Vid 9: ★

I don't like synchronous one-on-one coaching.

I'm happy to admit that because I like to feel like I'm having an impact.

So my favorite thing to do in my business is group coaching calls because we're in a room, maybe it's like 20, 30, 40, 50 people,

depending on which part of the business.
If it's our accelerator group, it's a smaller group.
If it's our builders club group, it's a bigger group.
They come to those sessions with needs.
They come to those sessions with, I have this problem.
I'm desperate for support, please help me.
And it is one of the most fulfilling parts of my business because I get the opportunity to dive deep with someone quickly.
And then there's other people in the call who are also kind of either tapping in and supporting or benefiting from what we're talking about.
It is amazing and I love doing it.
But then occasionally I'll do these synchronous one-on-one supports.
And what I mean by synchronous is that it's booked in the calendar
the same time every single week.
And the issue with this is that sometimes they're amazing.
Sometimes they come to the call and there's something that we're working on specifically.
It's like last week we did this, this week we did this,
this week we're doing this.
We need to move the needle in this direction.
And those are amazing.
But then sometimes the calls are just,
I've not done anything in the last seven days.
How's life?
That to me feels like a waste of their time.
It feels like a waste of their money.
It feels like a waste of my time because I could be helping them.
It's not an issue of them.
It's an issue of the model.
And I just realized that it was emotionally draining me because I felt like because I'm not making an impact every single time we get on a call, there would be this fear that I wasn't gonna do that each time we got on the call.
And that fear would bubble.

I'd be like, I hope they've done something.
And so it becomes kind of this redundant hour
that we could both benefit from not doing.

Vid 10: ★

arguably the most crucial thing you need to understand is that focus is going to be your best friend.
If you really want to achieve a lot next year,
if you want to turn this into the greatest year of your life,
you will do that by maximizing one, two, or maybe three goals.
Anything beyond that and you're just overwhelming yourself.
And I know it can be tempting, especially when the New Year's resolution period comes around,
to write your list of 13, 14, 15 different goals
that you all want to achieve.
You want to get in the best shape of your life.
You want to read 12 books.
You want to start this business.
You want to start that podcast.
You want to do all of these different things.
I know that can be tempting,
but if you really want to move the needle,
you can do that by achieving one thing exceptionally well.
And then all the results that come downstream of you achieving that thing are what makes you feel like your life is tremendously different.
And so my advice to you right now is pull out a pen and paper and set three goals, maximum of three goals for 2026.
The first can be something relating to your health.
The second, I want you to make it about your money.
If you want to have an amazing year in 2026,
you need to get your money right.
And the third is set some kind of goal around your profession,
your business that you're going to start,
the content you're going to create,
the brand you're going to build,
something relating to your purpose,
your profession,
the thing that you're going to achieve next year.

And keep it at that.
Just focus on those three and then maximize those three.
Give yourself the full mental space is to actually achieve those goals.
that you're going to be able to achieve those goals.
So let's get started.
So let's get started.

Vid 11:

This is going to sound insane, but your audience needs to want to be you.
You need to embody the perfect representation of the exact transformation you're trying to help your audience achieve.

If someone's able to relate to you through your origin story, but then see you as this perfect embodiment of the transformation they're trying to achieve, then they will believe that that's possible for them.

A great example of this is Superman.

Why do you think Superman was a country boy from Kansas?

We believe in this alien with seemingly infinite powers because he was a country boy from Kansas.

And so country boy from Kansas, orphan from Kansas is a story that all of us can relate to.

And so when we see Superman, this infinitely powerful being, suddenly we're able to connect the dots and see ourselves in him.

And so you have to show some of the lifestyle.

You have to show some of the things you've achieved.

A good way to do this is sit down with a pen and paper and look at everything that you've achieved, that if you wrote it down and told your younger self about it, they wouldn't believe it.

For me, it's wearing this fucking watch.

Wearing this is the craziest shit ever.

Driving the car that I drive, living on the beach.

All the things that I have are things that I could tell my younger self, and he wouldn't fucking believe it.

And so that's the kind of stuff that I need to show in my content that embodies the transformation that I'm trying to provide, embodies the life that I'm trying to help others create for themselves.

And so if you're trying to provide people with the transformation of losing weight and being fit, you need to be the perfect embodiment of that transformation. If you're trying to help people with their relationships, well, you better have a relationship that embodies the perfect representation of that transformation you were trying to help people provide. In order for people to trust you, your audience needs to want to be you. So share the fruits of your labor. Share the things that you've achieved that are fucking cool. Share all of it.

Vid 12:

Making money is the easy part. You just have to ask. And a great example of this is Alex Mosey. A few weeks ago, he made $100 million in a day with the launch of his new book, which, first of all, is fucking crazy. But second of all, hilariously, has resulted in a whole group of people online creating these videos, breaking down his webinar, or diagnosing how he was able to do it, or the psychology tricks he used in order to persuade people to do business with him without understanding that the entire reason that Alex was able to make $100 million that day had nothing to do with what he did that day. The only reason that Alex made $100 million in a single day with a book launch is because we all trusted him far more than we trust any other person selling books online. And that is a direct result of everything he's done over the last few years that led up to that day. So much so that when it came to the day, all he had to do was ask, and we all handed over our credit cards more than willingly. So much so that some of us spent thousands of dollars buying hundreds of books from him, all because he gave us the opportunity to buy.

But the thing that these creators who are making these breakdowns, trying to figure out how Alex made $100 million in a day aren't understanding, is that doing does not equal B.
I could take the exact same script,
the exact same slides,
the exact same team and infrastructure.
I could do all of the exact same things and achieve a tiny fraction of the results because I haven't built the brand that Alex and Mosey has built.
And so if you build a personal brand the right way

Vid 13: ★★

Digital products are incredibly easy to make, incredibly easy to test, incredibly easy to maintain,
and they're infinitely scalable.
You can have a thousand customers or one customer and the workload is exactly the same.
And so all you need to do is test the products till you find a winning product, then find a winning content format,
and then promote it so much to the point where you're making the money that you wanna make.
And yes, the volume is much higher and yes, you need to be more active with your social media, but if anything, that's more beneficial because you're creating more content, so you're growing your audience more,
and then as a result of making more content,
you're making more money.
So you create this positive feedback loop where all of the right things, all the right inputs are what create the outputs that you desire anyway.
I think the two best places that you could start is with low-ticket digital products, something like a Notion template or a Google Sheet or a LUT or a preset or something that people can use quickly, or a low-ticket information product.

So a $100 workshop, a $50 workshop, a $99 course, something simple that people can use that you never really have to touch.

All you need to make this work is you need to make something that is,
one, highly desirable,
something that people actually get value from.

It needs to be easy to make content about,
and this is one that so many people overlook because they think about the value of the product, and yes, that's important,
but they don't think about how easily it integrates into their particular content strategy.

Number three, it needs to be habit forming,
so something you use often.

If you create a product that forms habits for people, and then those people participate in those habits consistently,
they're going to tell other people about it.

And number four, it solves a painful problem.

What is something that you already do each week that every single time you have to do it is a ginormous pain in the ass?

Anything that you have that saves you time,
automates anything,
or helps you be more systemized or organized is gonna be something that you could potentially sell to other people.

Step number two that you need is a content strategy that sells it.

If you wanna sell stuff,
you're gonna have to tell people to buy your stuff.

There is no way around this.

So many people I speak to,
so many people I work with
are so scared of selling, and as a result,

they never sell anywhere near enough to make the amount of money that they wanna make.
And if you're unwilling to do this,
if you're scared of selling,
you're never gonna make any money.
So you need to get the fuck over that fear and start selling in your content.

Vid 14:

It can happen so fast.

The next five years are going to happen like that.

We're going to be at 2030, five years older.

And we're going to be like, where did five years go?

What the hell?

We're all in COVID.

That felt like yesterday.

And so that time is going to happen regardless.

And it's going to happen really, really fast.

And you either just incrementally do the things that are going to move you in that direction.

And you'll be five years more developed with more progress.

And people will ask you, how the fuck did you do that?

Or you end up in this place where you're kind of doing the same thing.

Confused and not taking action.

And then being like, oh, I should do that or not do that.

I should do that or not do that.

I had a mentor.

Thank fuck.

I don't know why this person was as generous with their time as they were.

The one line that stuck with me the most is they were like,

Tom, I can make you very, very, very rich.

The only issue is it's going to happen very, very, very slowly.

This idea that he instilled with me was the next 25 years of your life are going to go like that.

At the time, I was like 21.

He was like, you're going to be almost 50.

So fast, you will not believe it.

And you've either done the positive habits that make you very, very, very wealthy in 25 years.

Or you don't.

And it's a choice, not discipline.

You either choose to do those things and you'll be incredibly well off then.

Or you choose not to do them and you will not.

Vid 15:

It's not that you have to choose patience over the shortcut.

It's that patience is the shortcut
because the shortcut doesn't exist.

And so there is no world
where you get to cheat your way to success.

And so this idea that you are picking the long game over the short game is actually just you choosing the shortest possible route to achieve success.

One of my friends, he's a running influencer,
has a great quote.

He says, slowly is the fastest way to get to where you want to go.

And it's always true.

The slowest route that's going to be the most consistent over the longest period of time is not only the best, it's the fastest way to get to where you want to go.

The thing that you're most drawn to is probably the thing that you're doing the best.

And so it's not that it's accidentally worked out.

It's actually that you're doing the best job at that thing and that your unfair advantages tie you into building this community.

Vid 16: ★

Set a goal that is ridiculous.

Something that is far enough away from you that it genuinely seems unreasonable to even think about it, but it's close enough that it's not completely impossible.

This needs to be the kind of goal where you understand that this is gonna require a level of commitment and effort from you that far exceeds anything you've done prior.

The reason being is we need this goal to motivate an enormous amount of action and it needs to excite you.
And so setting something like I did, where I wanted to go from zero in my business to trying to make 50,000 US dollars in a single month selling digital products.
That $50,000 goal for me was close enough that it was somewhat tangible.
I didn't really know how I was gonna get there, but I knew that it was possible or at least within the realm of possibility.
But it was also far enough that it excited me.
I could start to think, okay, what would my life look like if I hit this goal?
And having that process, thinking about that over and over again, started to motivate and demand from me a level of action that exceeded anything that I'd done prior.
Almost immediately, overnight, I went on to take action in my business, create content, create a volume of products, test things in a way that I've never done before, because I knew I would be letting myself down if I didn't do anything less than extraordinary in the process of pursuing this goal.
And so for you, you have to sit down and...

Vid 17: ★

I want you to know your numbers.

These are all of the numbers you are going to start tracking each and every week.

I don't care if you do it in an Apple Notes page.

I don't care if you do it in a Google Doc, but you need to know exactly what you're doing for each of these numbers every single week in order to grow.

Now to do this, you're going to have content published.
You're going to have video views.
You're going to have number of CTAs.
So how many times you had a call to action in your content?
Because you'll have the number of videos you post,
but then you won't have CTAs on every single one of those videos.
And so there's going to be a discrepancy between these two numbers.
You're then going to have leads,
which in your case is the amount of people who responded to your CTA.
You'll find this number in ManyChat.
So this is the amount of people who triggered your automation.
You'll then have page visits.
And then finally, you're going to track sales and revenue.
Then you're going to track the conversion rate between each step.
So you're going to track content published to video views.
This will give you your average view per video.
I want you to track your video views to leads.
This will be a conversion rate percentage.
The amount of total video views divided by the amount of leads.
So the amount of people that triggered your automations.
This will be a conversion rate.
CTAs to leads.
So this will be the average amount of leads you get per CTA.
Then leads to page visits.
Again, this will be a conversion rate percentage.
And then page visits to sale conversion.
This will be a conversion rate percentage.
You need to track all of these numbers.
I don't need to give you baselines because your only goal is if you're not currently making the money, you need to increase either the raw numbers or the conversion rate percentage.

The thing I'm trying to instill here for you by telling you these numbers is that you are in control of exactly how much money you make.
You are in control of these numbers.
Now that you know this information,
you can look at the end of the week and go,
we made this much money.
How did we get here?

Vid 18: ★★★★★

$20,000 is very achievable. Now, I want to share some real math with you to give you an idea of exactly how this goal could shape out for you. This is my real Instagram for the last 30 days.
I've gotten 1,222,337 Instagram views. I've gotten 33,995 YouTube video views. I've gotten 22,483 page visits on my time to build landing page. Now, I'm going to assume a 3% conversion rate because I sell a high-ticket coaching offer, and so it's not the same conversion rate. But my real view to page visit conversion rate is 1.79%, meaning of my total video views, 1.79% clicked on the page. Now, to hit a $20,000 month with these real numbers for a $50 product, you need 400 sales per month, 13,333 page visits per month, 784,313 views per month, meaning that you need to get 26,143 views per video. I know for some of you, you look at that and you go, 26,000 views is a fuckload of views on an Instagram video. But I promise you, it's not nearly as much as you might expect. It's a far more achievable goal for most of you than you probably thought 20,000 was going to be. I promise you.

Vid 19: ★★★★★

You do not wanna operate between $300 and $1,000. Between $300 and $1,000 is what I call info product business, no man's land.
In that situation, you have customers who are desperate. You have customers who are buying your program as a Hail Mary. You have customers who are spending not much, but in their opinion, it's everything. And so you end up in this situation where people are spending $300 with your business, but acting as if they've spent 30,000.

And you really don't wanna operate in this area.

You wanna stick with something low ticket, provide value for those people at a cost that they can afford, or go to high ticket. Get the fuck away from that middle period of $300 to $1,000 and sell something high ticket.

And so for most of you who are starting out, your skillset or the things that you have are probably not worth $1,000 yet.

And so selling something for 500 or 600 or 700 is what I call info product business, no man's land.

And you wanna stay out of that area.

And so I would recommend if you can stick between zero and $300 and then leverage up eventually to selling something that is worth $1,000, $1,500, $2,000.

Vid 20:

I feel this enormous pressure that information what I deliver has to be like something very mind-blowing. So I'm constantly feeling like I'm running out of knowledge and things to teach.

This always happens when people feel like they're making content for their peers, not their former version of themselves. And so you actually want to make content that seems overly simplistic for you, which might be mind-blowing to other people. My YouTube video where I was like, how to make $20,000 with low-ticket digital products. That was a video that before I made it, I was like, nah, this is too simple. Like, nah, people fucking loved it.

The more simplistic your idea, the better it will probably do. And so you have to remember what might seem overly simplistic may seem revolutionary to someone who's a few steps behind you.

Vid 21: ★★☆☆

I think a lot of people, they want a big launch now and that actually impacts their ability to have a big business later because they're so intimidated by like, okay, what do I even fucking package? You just need to take that first step. Like Philippe just needs to put out that questionnaire to get some leads in the door, to start getting some one-on-one coaching clients.

So then he can start to understand the problems they have and then put together a little bit of a curriculum and then have a group coach. Like it just, all of this stuff snowballs based on action.

The only reason I have the business I have today is because some part of me was like, you should run a one-off workshop. That was it. It's way less intimidating and intense. It's just, what's the first thing I need to do? You just need to take that first step.

Vid 1: ★★☆☆

Everyone talks about story sequences, but no one actually shows you how to create them.

So treat this real as a short story sequence masterclass and please take notes.

The first thing I do when I create story sequence is that I choose the framework I want to follow among those seven ones. Let's say today I'm going to run an education story sequence and I would pick this education framework and then I will write the copy of the story sequence based on that framework. And then I would create the story for this one. You have the pain, hook, agitate, proof, desire, whatever. But the most important here is the frameworks.

You need to have high converting. And the problem with that is that people only have one framework that they use for every single story sequence they post. Something like that.

Pain, desire, proof. And I'm not saying that's bad, but this framework alone misses many buying triggers that you need to activate in people's brain to convert them at a much higher level.

That's why I created this story sequence strategy made up of seven different frameworks that all play with pain, desire and proof, of course, but each one has a different purpose. Some of them are more focused on trust, some others on pain, some others on like authority by giving value and having one story sequence that focuses on one converting aspect allows you to enter much more deeply into your prospect's mind. And once you enter deeply, you can untie all the knots inside of it.

So as you can see on Monday, we activate this buying trigger on Tuesday, this Wednesday, this one, et cetera, et cetera. And at the end of the week, they're all activated because each framework is proven to activate one buying trigger in people's brain. And why does it work so well? Because like everything I build, it's based on human psychology and on real market testing. So if you're interested in accessing all these frameworks, so you can optimize and systemize your story sequences and gain hours every day, comment the word framework, and I'll send them to you with all the details you need to make use of it not tomorrow, but today.

Vid 2:

this is my entire content strategy but this is much more important this is the strategy behind the huge volume that i'm able to post volume is one of the most underrated way to outcompete your competitors and i personally post 14 pieces of short form per week and two pieces of long form every single week so how am i able to do it it's all because of the social media organization i have here's how i treat my social media for the long four i have two youtube channels the first one is the business youtube channel and the second one is the authentic youtube channel on the first one i post only value focused content and on the second one i post only authenticity focused content with a bit of proof which means that we have the perfect mix between authority connection and trust which are by the way the three layers of conversion that play with human psychology whatever now what i do is that when i post a long form i repurpose it into four short forms and i do this for every single loan for my post for value and for authenticity content so for both channels and i do the same with proof videos like client testimonials that i post on my authenticity channel i repurpose it into short form and what do i do with this short form i send them to instagram and that's where i post them and here's my instagram organization i have my main account my personal grant and i have my agency account which is the business account on this one i post value and authenticity but on this i post only proof because that's what people want to see when they get interested in your program or service now if you're interested in accessing the actual strategy and the actual psychology behind the content comment the word strategy and i'll send it to you

Vid 3:

Every single day I see videos like how to never run out of ideas for your personal brand, how to have unlimited ideas. And the truth is that you don't need new ideas. And that's something that most people don't tell you about personal branding. The more you repeat yourself, the stronger your brand. Why? Because a brand means associations. What people associate to you is what makes your brand. And in order for your brand to be strong and powerful, you need to talk about a few topics. You need to be known for those topics, not for everything. That's why Alex Homози always repeat the same things, the same strategies, the same sales tactics, the same skit, productivity tips, but in different ways. It's the same value, but from different angles. And that's why you don't need new ideas. Just find a way to repeat yourself without people noticing.

Vid 4:

Because this is how it works. Once you understand human psychology, making money will never be a problem anymore. Because when you think about it, what is business about? It's about humans. So what should you learn if you want to thrive in business? Humans, how human beings work. And you learn that through psychology. So when you know deep down how to create desire, how to create trust, how to get people to love you, how to get people to follow you like a cult, you basically master the game. And that's just pretty dangerous because some people are using this for bad things. That's why you should be careful.

Vid 5:

(With timestamps)[00:00:00.000] First things first, half of your acquisition problems will be solved by posting more volume.
[00:00:04.280] The other half of your acquisition problems will be solved by having the right content strategy.
[00:00:08.000] When you mix both together, you're sure to have a healthy acquisition system.

[00:00:11.340] Now, posting more content is easy. You just need the right content system now.

[00:00:14.460] For a content strategy, the other half is a bit harder because many people are talking about their own strategies for content.

[00:00:19.620] The truth is, if you dive deep into the core of content, how does it trigger people to buy?

[00:00:27.340] And that's why I dive deep into human psychology, as you know, to create the best content strategy, even though it's not really a strategy.

[00:00:33.100] And that was proven to print.

Vid 6: ★

and i realized that deep down we all know exactly what we should be doing to get results but we avoid it you know that quote the results you're looking for are in the work you're avoiding that's the most accurate sentence i've ever heard for me it was outreach i hated it so guess what i avoided

it i was spending hours working on my systems my delivery structure my youtube long form just to feel productive but i wasn't it is none of these things bring clients what brings clients is conversations outreach real connections and the day i stopped running away from it is the day everything changed i used to avoid outreach because i thought it was boring as and that it had no leverage and it was at first but after doing it over and over again something shifted and that's when i realized outreach is not low leverage at all it's actually one of the highest leverage things you can do if you know how to do it right so if anyone here is interested in getting the unique outreach method that i created that allows me to send 450 personalized outreach per month just comment

the word outreach and i'll send it to you

Vid 7:

The reason why most coaches are having a lot of reach

but not making a lot of cash is because they didn't build the bridge that links their traffic to their bank account.
And that bridge is the conversion process.
So here's exactly how you convert new eyes that get into your content with all the possible converting mechanisms.
The first mechanism is your Instagram profile.
It's an extremely powerful converting asset
where everything should be chosen carefully.
Your bio, your highlight stories,
your pin posts, your story sequences,
but even more importantly,
your content strategy.
And this leads us to the second converting mechanism, the intentional content strategy.
Each video you post has its own purpose.
Some pieces of content are here to attract,
some others to convert,
but most people don't treat their content as such.
That's why I created the pre-suasion funnel that leverages organic content to pre-sold people on your offer, both with short-form and long-form videos.
The third conversion asset is the appointment setting process.
When prospects reach out,
you need to shift their mind
from I'm curious to fuck,
I need to buy from this guy.
And this is done through the appointment setting process.
So if you want the exact appointment setting template that I give my clients to convert inbound leads in their DMs, just comment the word setting and I'll send it to you.

Vid 8: ★

I've realized that when you truly, deeply believe that everything is going your way,
everything starts going your way.

And when you truly believe that God is with you, God is with you.
And I'm telling you this because I've always had faith that God was with me in my journey, orchestrating everything in my life to go well,
so I can get to my goals as fast as possible.
And guess what? It worked.
I've met hundreds of synchronicities, hundreds of signs that were here to guide me, to help me in my journey.
And without them, I wouldn't be here today.
And that's why I say that I believe this is true.
Now, to give you a short example, at the beginning of my journey, when I had no money to invest, some people applied to work for me for completely free.
And they came out of nowhere, and it didn't make sense.
But when you take a step back, you understand that this was God helping me.
Like, those guys reached out and were like,
Bro, I love your vibe, you're like my brother, you don't need to pay me.
And this is just insane.
Because when I needed it the most, God gave me what I needed.
God gave this to me.
And I know these people are watching this video right now,
and I got to tell you guys, huge thank you.
Because without you, the journey would have been a thousand times harder.
See how God uses situations and people around you to guide you,
to bring you messages, to help you.
It's just fucking crazy.
But in order for this to happen, you need to be open to God's help.
You need to have faith.
And when you pursue what you know is true to you,
God will always help you.

Vid 9:

at first i didn't understand why it was so important to niche down and to define who you're selling to but it's simple these things are what allow you to go from this to this you can charge
a much higher ticket once you niche down and let me explain why first you serve people much deeper

which means the transformation is bigger second your messaging is clearer and the clearer the messaging the quicker people buy third you become the obvious choice in the niche and when people face the problem you solve they instantly think of you now the best way to understand this is through the bad versus good example let's start with the bad example this is the worst positioning you could have you're a fitness coach that helps men lose weight why it's the worst because you're categorized as the lose weight coach and thousands of other people are offering the same coaching as you your messaging is broad and you're basically a commodity that's what we want to avoid at all cost because in this situation your two only ways to compete are to have either an insanely famous personal brand and competing on price means you're a commodity and it sucks but the good example here you're a fitness coach that helps obese entrepreneurs lose weight and become fit without sacrificing their business this is a much better positioning because you become the lose weight coach for obese entrepreneurs and not a lot of people are offering that which means that you can charge a higher price on the other hand you have a clear and sharp messaging which is much more efficient to sell and you become the obvious choice in the niche so niching down is a counter-intuitive move because you feel like you're missing on the opportunity to serve much more clients but it's the opposite and the best way to explain this is through this metaphor when you try to please everyone you shine light all around like this light bulb but this light can't cut through nothing when in reality when you niche down when you focus all your energy on one thing you have much more power and precision and impact than this light bulb here i made an entire video called the positioning masterclass that dives deep into positioning and i know it's a boring topic but the people who nail this are the ones who can charge a higher ticket and win bigger than everyone and if you're not able to nail the boring things then you'll never be able to go beyond 20 30 k per month so if you're interested in me sending you this entire video this entire breakdown with all the secrets of positioning just comment the word positioning and they'll send it to you

one same skill makes this guy 10k per month and this guy 100k per month but what's the difference between these guys is the way they sell one scale can be sold in three different ways done for you done with you or do it yourself then which one is the best let's see with them for you you can charge

a high ticket which is good but you can't take on a lot of clients with a done with you you can charge a mid ticket but you can take on more clients which is interesting and with a do it yourself you can't charge a high ticket but you can take on unlimited clients which one should you choose actually none of them is optimal what we really want is something that has a high ticket and that can take on unlimited clients and that's possible with a hybrid offer an offer that makes this done for you done with you and do it yourself that way you can have an offer that has everything perceived value of a don't for you the human contact from a done with you and the scalability of a do it yourself and the thing is that most people don't know about hybrid offers and that's why you should take advantage of it right now if you're interested in building your own hybrid offer i made an entire video breaking down exactly how you can do it so you can sell a super expensive offer to a lot of people without fulfillment problems if you're interested in this just comment the word hybrid and i'll send it to you in the dms

Vid 11:

Done for you, 10%.

Done with you, 20%.

DIY, 70%.

What the fuck are those numbers?

This is the organization of your offer.

In order for your offer to be desirable,
you need to have a part of done for you.

But in order for your offer to be scalable,
you need to have a part of DIY.

And that's why it's the biggest part.

Because we want the biggest scalability and the biggest desirability.

That's why we only have 10% of our offer
that is done for you.

Now, in your marketing, and this is interesting,
the way you emphasize each part is the opposite.

Done for you, 70%.

Done with you, 20%.

DIY, 10%.

As you can see, we've completely reversed the values here.

70% of your ads should push the done for you part.

20% the done with you and 10% only the DIY.

And that's how you build an offer
that is highly scalable and highly desirable.

And this combination of things allows you to charge a high ticket for an enormous amount of people.

If you're interested in launching this kind of offer,
which is called a hybrid offer,
comment the word DIY.

And I'll send you a video of me breaking down exactly how you can do it.

Let me ask you a question: who would say no to waking up every single morning to a calendar packed with qualified leads who are actually ready to buy? [1] No one, because the goal is to have people chasing you to buy; this is achieved through the persuasion funnel, which is based 100% on human psychology to flip three specific "switches" in a prospect's brain. [1] These three psychological triggers that must be activated one by one are trust, authority (seeing you as the expert), and connection (connecting on a personal level). [2] Without these switches activated, people are not ready to buy, but once they are flipped, prospects show up to sales calls pre-sold. [2]

The persuasion funnel is designed to take people through a journey where your content does 80% of the sales job by flipping these switches as they move further down the funnel. [3] This system takes complete strangers through various stages of content—attraction, conversion, and nurturing—using both short-form and long-form content to turn them into buyers. [4] To do this effectively, every piece of content must be treated as a true sales asset with a specific role in the ecosystem. [5]

The strategy utilizes four types of content:

- * Attraction content: Focused on virality to bring people in. [5]
- * Authority content: Value-based content to show expertise. [5]
- * Trust content: Proof-focused content. [5]
- * Connection content: Authenticity-focused content. [5]

While attraction makes up about one-fourth of the content, the other three-quarters are focused on conversion (authority, trust, and connection). [5] In practice, this means posting two reels per day: one authentic-driven and one value-driven. [6] Layers of proof and virality are then added as seasonings to these main pieces. [6] For example, you can add proof by mentioning your specific results within a value video or by filming in a high-status environment like a Ferrari. [7]

Value content is divided into business value (tactical problem-solving) and personal/character value (breaking beliefs and shifting mindsets on topics like discipline or focus). [7], [8] Authenticity content includes lifestyle (sharing hobbies like tennis to build personal bonds) and the inner world (sharing morals, values, and vulnerable stories). [8], [9]

**Volume is key** to this system; the schedule includes **14 short-form pieces** and **two long-form pieces** per week. [9] To manage this without spending more than three to four hours a week, the process is **productized**. [10] Long-form value content goes on a main YouTube channel, while long-form authenticity and client testimonials go on a secondary channel. [10], [11] These long-form videos are then **repurposed** into shorts for Instagram. [12]

On Instagram, a **personal brand account** is used for authenticity and value, while a separate **business account** (such as "EPB scale") is used to showcase overwhelming proof. [13] Finally, reels include **CTAs (Calls to Action)** that encourage viewers to comment a keyword to receive a link to a long-form YouTube video, creating a powerful **conversion loop** that keeps the prospect within your content ecosystem. [13], [14]

The following is the extracted script from the provided sources, detailing the transition from traditional coaching to a **productized consulting model****:

If you're a coach or an agency, the truth is you'll never hit more than 14 to 15k per month if you don't understand the **power of productization** in your business model [1]. By choosing the right offer model, you can scale from 10k per month to 100k, 200k, or even 300k every single month [1]. The same skill, such as video editing or paid ads, can make you 10k a month working 12 hours a day in an agency model, or 100k a month working 4 hours a day in a **productized consulting model** [1]. The only difference is the way you sell it [1].

You can sell a skill in three ways: **done for you (DFY)**, **done with you (DWY)**, or **do-it-yourself (DIY)** [2].

- * **Done for you:** You charge a **high ticket** because you serve clients deeply, but it is time-consuming and limits how many clients you can take [2]. You do all the work, giving you high control and usually high results for the client [3].

- * **Done with you:** You charge a **mid ticket**; the work balance is flat between you and the client, and the results can vary [2], [3].

- * **Do-it-yourself:** This is typically a course where you charge a lower ticket because you serve clients lightly [2]. The client does all the work, meaning you have almost no control over the outcome and results are usually low, but it is **highly scalable** [3], [4].

The two most important aspects of an offer are **desirability and scalability** [4]. A DFY service is highly desirable because you do everything, but it is not scalable [4], [5]. A DIY course is highly scalable because it requires no fulfillment work after it is produced, but it is not desirable because the client must do all the work [5], [6]. Most people think the middle ground (DWY) is best, but what we really want is the **scalability of a course** with the **desirability of a done-for-you service** [6].

This is achieved through **hybrid offers** [7]. These offers mix DFY, DWY, and DIY elements all at once [7]. While the actual fulfillment might be **70% DIY (video modules)**, 20% DWY (calls), and only 10% DFY, your marketing emphasizes the DFY part as 70% of the value [7]. This isn't about lying, but about emphasizing the high-value perceived parts to the client so they don't feel disappointed, while maintaining the **scalability of a DIY model** [7], [8].

There are two traditional ways to get rich: selling something cheap to the masses (low fulfillment) or selling something expensive to a small audience (high fulfillment) [8]. The **productized consulting model** is a "glitch" that allows you to sell a **high-ticket program to a huge audience with low fulfillment requirements** [9], [10]. We combine the high perceived value of a DFY service with the low-effort fulfillment of a course [11]. Because price is proportional to desirability, we can charge 8k or more while taking on hundreds of clients without fulfillment problems [11], [10].

However, this doesn't work for every skill [12]. "Commoditized" skills like basic video editing or website building are hard to sell for 10k [12]. The trick is to stop selling the **passion skill** (e.g., building a website) and start selling the **business skill** (e.g., how to scale a website building agency) [13], [14]. You teach the skills that allow people to make money, such as marketing, sales, and client acquisition [14]. By packaging your knowledge into a program that mixes DFY, DWY, and DIY, you gain the **scalability of a course and the desirability of a done-for-you service** [15].

The core idea presented in the sources is a **YouTube-centric coaching funnel** designed to generate high-profit margins—documented at up to $246,000 in a single month—by eliminating traditional sales barriers like landing pages, appointment setters, and closers [1], [2], [3]. This strategy, largely credited to Iman Gadzhi, replaces complex external funnels with a content ecosystem built entirely within the YouTube platform [2], [4], [3].

The funnel operates through a specific hierarchy of content and automated qualification:

- * Top-of-Funnel (Traffic Mechanism): This stage utilizes lifestyle-heavy, "low-value" content (such as "Day in the Life" vlogs) to capture a high volume of viewership and broad attention [5], [6]. While the demographic quality is lower at this stage, it serves as the primary engine for pulling eyes onto the brand [5], [7].
- * The Flywheel VSSL (Conversion Mechanism): This is the "money printer" of the operation, consisting of a long-form, high-value video—often one to six hours long—that introduces the business model in depth [8], [9]. By providing extensive value, this video serves to pre-sell the viewer, ensuring they are ready to buy before they ever hop on a call [8], [10].
- * Nurturing and Social Proof: For those not immediately sold, the strategy uses bottom-of-funnel value videos (detailed technical setups) and testimonials to build credibility and nurture leads who require more evidence of results [11], [12].
- * Automated Qualification: Instead of using a human setter, the funnel directs traffic to a Typeform application that automatically qualifies or disqualifies leads based on their financial situation and ability to invest in a high-ticket offer (typically $6,000 to $12,000) [13], [14], [15]. This process includes screening for financing eligibility through tools like SplitIt, which allows international clients to pay in installments [16], [17].

A significant insight from the sources is how this model leverages the YouTube algorithm by prioritizing "session time" [18]. By directing viewers from short lifestyle clips to multi-hour value videos, the funnel keeps users on the platform longer, which prompts YouTube to automatically recommend the high-converting VSSL to the creator's ideal customer profile (ICP) [18], [19].

Ultimately, the goal of this "raw, real, and authentic" approach is to ensure that by the time a lead books a call, they have consumed one to two hours of value, rendering "slimy" sales tactics and objection handling unnecessary
